

REFORESTATION BILL KILLED IN ASSEMBLY IN TUESDAY SESSION

MADISON, Wis. — Reforestation through purchase of county lands by the state from its conservation fund, was killed in the assembly Tuesday morning when the Burke bill was non-concurred in without debate and without roll call. It had been sent to endorsement and third reading almost unanimously.

The measure represented a step toward a complete program of reforestation in Wisconsin, and its defeat is taken as an indication of lack of concern on the part of the lower house toward reforestation. Assemblyman Bartingale made the motion for concurrence, the bill having already gone through the senate.

Provision was made that the state through the conservation commission might purchase any county lands adopted for forestry purposes. Any unappropriated money in the conservation fund could be expended with approval of the governor, secretary of state and state treasurer, for the acquisition of these lands.

Assemblyman Higgins brought in a resolution condemning the common council of Milwaukee for its refusal to extend a welcome to General Pershing when he visits the city in behalf of the American Legion. The measure was referred to the judiciary committee.

Men will have to be satisfied with their lower rights under existing law in the state, as a result of refusal of the assembly to reconsider the Sullivan bill, redrafting the laws governing dower. The measure was indefinitely postponed on Friday by a margin of two votes.

BRIDEGROOM WALKS 28 MILES THROUGH SNOW TO WEDDING

CHICAGO, Ill. — The wedding of Miss Catherine Verne of Greenville, Ill., was not delayed Tuesday night at Freeport because her bridegroom, William A. Schenck, was on a train blocked by snow in Wisconsin. Schenck got off the train and walked twenty-eight miles through the snow to claim his bride.

THE total number of motor cars registered in the United States for the year 1920 records a gain of 17.16% over 1919. There is an automobile for every 12 persons throughout the country.

In the representative states served by the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) the percentage of gain is 23.43%. In South Dakota there is an automotive vehicle for every 5.24 persons in the state.

The increases over 1919 in the states served by this Company are:

States	1919	1920	Percentage of Increase
So. Dakota	104,625	122,040	16.64
Iowa	353,060	442,200	21.81
Minnesota	259,743	323,572	24.57
Missouri	229,577	295,817	28.85
Kansas	228,601	265,385	16.09
No. Dakota	82,885	90,840	9.59
Michigan	296,378	412,275	39.10
Wisconsin	236,974	303,246	27.96
Indiana	277,255	332,207	19.82
Illinois	478,438	569,127	18.97
	2,557,476	3,156,709

Sixty percent of the new cars sold in the ten states served by the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) during 1920 were bought by farmers. These figures indicate one reason why the demand for petroleum products was so insistent in this territory. The farmer had to conserve his time, and the automobile was the only solution for this problem.

Another reason was the increase of automotive machinery on the farm, for these machines were the deciding factor which insured the phenomenal crops harvested during 1920.

The efficiency of this motor driven equipment was due in a large measure to the efficiency of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) system of distribution, which assured the farmer that his needs would be supplied and his time conserved.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is an essential economic factor in the national life. It contributes a definite quota of imperative service to society. It is especially organized to render this service. It operates in an environment of the most intense competition; it survives because it is efficient.

MINISTER GRACE

Let no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth, but that which is good to the use of edifying, that it may minister grace unto the hearers.—Ephesians 11: 2.

The Mayor's Inaugural

ASIDE from the extended discussion of state legislation affecting all cities of the state, Mayor Bentley's fourth inaugural address, touching matters of immediate local interest, divides easily into three sections:

- (1) Suggestions for public activities with which the entire city will agree.
- (2) Suggestions which will arouse controversy.
- (3) Exhibitions of personal animosity of no public usefulness.

There is much in the message which is constructive, much with which this newspaper thoroughly agrees and to which it offers its earnest support as a matter of public service. No one can cavil at such items as motorizing the fire department, improving and extending the work of the public library and the schools, adequately lighting the parks, building new schools in the extreme north and south ends of the city, filling out the details of the sewer and water systems, and so on. These are the things that must be done to keep the city a city, to care for expansion and foster progress and comfort. In working for these ends the mayor and the council are entitled to claim the backing and encouragement of every element in the city, and will doubtless receive it.

There are other items of proposed public policy suggested in the mayor's address with which the city may not agree so readily. New street construction work is generally to be passed along by the mayor's proposals, to 1922, which is quite likely good business in view of the prevailing high cost of brick and other paving materials. But the reason for a referendum vote, delaying until 1922 repair work on macadam that is already badly worn, is not so apparent. We would have welcomed a more determined disposition to do as much as possible this year in order to ease the unemployment situation by every means in the city's power, but it may be that the city, with sewer and other construction work already ordered, is now embarked upon all the public work that can be handled with the 1921 budget. At all events, there is room here for honest difference of opinion as to the best policy for the most prosperity in the city, in which the mayor's position has the added weight of his presumable familiarity with city affairs.

It is impossible to form judgment on such suggestions as those regarding extravagance in the schools and the formation of the new civic welfare committee, for the address here was indefinite. Where the mayor believes extravagance to have entered into the schools, what matters the civic welfare committee will take up, can only be conjectured.

In view of the fact that full public knowledge of government affairs is the only safeguard of democracy one can understand the mayor's proposal that the council authorize the publication of proceedings of all official meetings of the council, board of education, health, park and police commissions; but there is another possible point of difference to be found here in the added expense involved in this large increase of official publications. On other minor points, too, there is likely to be controversy between rival views of what is best public policy.

In addition to these categories already reviewed, there are certain suggestions in the mayor's inaugural in which it is regretably obvious that personal hostility to individuals and groups with whom the mayor has not agreed, rather than any very cogent consideration of community policy, has been the inspiration. Such is the proposal to have the council demand that the railroad commission remand the union station case to the mayor and aldermen for disposition—a procedure we believe to be unique in Wisconsin, and hardly likely to have great effect. That the suggestion, could it be effectuated, would be ominous for the success of the union station project no one needs to be told who is familiar with the union station fight. Indeed, there is virtual admission in the same paragraph, for the mayor proposes improvement of existing depots as an alternative with a readiness that seems hopelessly to despair of the possibility of a union station. The whole section breathes lukewarmness—there is nothing in it suggestive of the uncompromising battle for the union depot which is obviously necessary if the city is to get what it wants: the sort of battle, incidentally, that is now being waged. It is the city's misfortune that the organization of the fight for the union station happened to be through channels to which the mayor is opposed, for the mayor here gives proof that he is willing and anxious to prevent his opponents scoring a success even at the cost of a universally desired public improvement which would entail no expense to the city.

The personal animus is even more glaring in the bald demand with which the mayor closed his address—the demand that the board of education humble itself before him or turn in its resignations en masse. The matter has no relation to the city's business, or any public interest. The demand is not because of any malfeasance of the board, nor for any failure of performance of its duties. It is simply that the mayor believes there is an impression in Madison—for that matter it is stronger in La Crosse—in view of the long battle that was necessary to get school building started—that he was not over-zealous in the interest of the public schools. Therefore, so runs this remarkable manifesto, the board will at once make public obeisance, and hasten to inform the powers that be at Madison that the mayor of La Crosse is a fond and generous patron of the schools—or "off with their heads!" It does not matter that there is no evidence that the board of education spread the alleged impression in Madison beyond the fact that some members attended a meeting of the state teachers' association which drafted a bill that does not sit well with the La Crosse city hall. Proof? What need of it? It is sufficient that the mayor has smelt a breath of criticism, and he will be revenged on it even at the cost of being ridiculous.

Of all the matter in the message, some of it might be good, some of it less so, we predict that this closing note will prove the high spot of discussion. Its spirit is intolerantly similar to that of the less majestic laws which made it punishable to breathe criticism of kings in Europe before the war. It is the climax, so far, of a career that has never been notable for humility; an assumption of supremacy which must be either faced and fought or cravenly swallowed. The issue is not even remotely one of public concern. The mayor seems bent on forcing a struggle on the point that, if he can make it so, there shall be no other dignity, self-respect or independence in the community that must not grovel before the mayor's, even as William Tell's generation did honor to Gessler's hat. Mr. Bentley takes a bold position—and if our estimate of the spirit of the men on the board of education is not amiss, he is going to be called upon to defend it with some energy.

In Ye Olden Times

TEN YEARS AGO TODAY
Edward C. Mable, advanced senior at the high school, was last night awarded first place in the oratorical contest of that institution which took place in the auditorium. His name will now be engraved on the large loving cup which is awarded to the winner of the school contest each year, along with those of Paul Esch, winner in 1907 and 1908; Wm. Stevenson who won in 1909, and Howard Jones who won in 1910. At a meeting of the Governor's Guard association held in Co. B, Armory last night it was decided to start a campaign for $10,000 for a new auditorium to house the guard. Present plans call for a building with a seating capacity of 2,500 people and special arrangements are to be made for both of La Crosse's militia companies.

Sunday afternoon as the yard crew of the Northwestern road was switching a string of cars consigned to La Crosse onto a siding, one of the cars, which was loaded with charcoal destined for the Stoddard hotel and Tausche Hardware company, burst into flames. The entire car and its load were destroyed. The charcoal was shipped last Wednesday from Michigan and it is believed the charcoal was loaded without being given a chance to cool.

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY
The plank walk leading to the north side has been forced in by new posts and planks.

H. T. Waters, the wholesale cigar manufacturer at 117 North Third street, will remove to La Crosse his headquarters June 1st and will locate in Minneapolis.

The establishment of an electric power house in Trempealeau for operating an electric line from that place to Eurick, Black River Falls and eventually to Onalaska and La Crosse, is projected. The plan to light Trempealeau with electricity is the nucleus of the establishment of the line.

Prof. O. G. Gilbert of the Seventh district school, has started a business training school which he teaches Saturday mornings from 9 to 12. The work has met with much favor among the older pupils of the grade schools as it is along the line of business practice in accounts, bills, banking, etc.

THIRTY YEARS AGO TODAY
Mr. E. R. Barron returned today from a buying trip to New York.

Harry H. Hirschheimer died Sunday evening in Hurley, Wis., from the effects of an injury received in a railroad accident six months ago. Mr. Hirschheimer was the son of L. Hirschheimer, one of the first citizens of La Crosse, and was a prominent Mason.

A Man For the Ages

BY Irving Bacheller

(Copyright 1919 by Irving Bacheller)

Colonel Zachary Taylor, who had lately arrived from Florida and was presently returning with a regiment of recruits for the Seminole war, was of Mrs. Kinzie's party. He was then a man of middle age with iron gray hair and close cropped side whiskers. A splendid figure he was in his uniform. He remembered Larry and took him in hand and introduced him to many of his friends as the best scout in the Black Hawk war, and in spite of his dress, the young man became one of the lions of the evening.

"I reckon I could tell you some things about this boy," the Colonel said to him.

"He may not be afraid of guns or Indians but he has always been scared of women," said she.

"Which shows that he has a just sense of the relative importance of perils," the Colonel answered. "A man of the highest civility is ever afraid in the presence of a lovely woman and chiefly for her sake. I once held a beautiful vase in my hands, they said it was worth ten thousand dollars. I was afraid until I had put it down."

A great piano player from New York was introduced. She played on Mrs. Kinzie's instrument, after which Tim sang numbers of Scottish ballads and "delightfully" if one may believe a chronicler so partial as Harry Needles, the value of whose judgment is somewhat affected by the statement in his diary that as she stood by the piano her voice and beauty set his heart thumping in his breast. However of the charm and popularity of this young lady there is ample evidence in copies of The Democrat which are still preserved and in sundry letters and journals of that time.

The refreshment table was decorated with pyramids of quartered oranges in nets of spun sugar and large frosted cakes. There were roasted pigeons and turkeys and chickens and a big ham, served with jelly, and platters of doughnuts and bread and butter and cabbage salad. Every one ate heartily and was served often, for the supper was thought to be the most important feature of a party those days.

After refreshments the men went outside to smoke and talk—some with pipes—of canals, railroads and corner lots while the younger people were dancing and being proudly surveyed by their mothers.

As Harry and the ladies were leaving Colonel Taylor came to them and said:

"Young man, I am the voice of your country. I call you to Florida. Will you go with us next week?"

Harry looked into Tim's eyes.

"The campaign will be over in a year and I need you badly," the Colonel urged.

"I can't say no to my country," Harry answered. "I will join your regiment at Bradenton on its way down the river."

That night Harry and Tim stood by the gate talking after Mrs. Kelso had gone into the house.

"Tim, I love you more than ever," said the boy. "The sage you can get a divorce. I have brought the papers for you to sign. They will make you free. I have done it for your sake. You will be under no obligation. I want you to be free to marry whom you will. I would be the happiest man in the world if you were to choose me. I haven't the wealth of some of those city men. I can only offer you my love."

"Be careful and please let go of my hand," she said. "The time has come when it would be possible to spoil our story. I'm not going to say a word of love to you. I am not free yet. We couldn't marry if we wanted to. I wish you to be under no obligation to me. Many things may happen in a year. I am glad you are going to see more of the world before you settle down. Harry, you will stop in New Orleans and see some of its beautiful women. It will help you to be sure to know yourself a little better and to be sure of what you want to do."

There was a note of sadness in her voice as she spoke these words which he recalled with a sense of comfort on many a lonely day.

THEIR "KIT CARSON HIKING CLUB" SOON PROVED BIG SUCCESS

Tom, Frank and Eddie were hikers. They decided to organize a hiking club.

"Think we ought to have any more fellows to start with?" asked Frank.

"We can start with just the three of us," replied Frank, "and take in more later."

So one Saturday the boys met in Frank's barn and started the club. Frank was elected president, Tom secretary, and Eddie treasurer. Dues were 10 cents a week.

"Now we ought to have a name," suggested Eddie. But no suitable name could be decided on so at Tom's suggestion they decided to take it up with his father, who, as Tom said, "was pretty good at that kind of stuff."

Mr. Johnson made several suggestions that didn't strike the boys as entirely satisfactory. "Well, then," he said, "how about 'Kit Carson Hikers'?" Kit Carson was a famous old woodsman and Indiana fighter—don't you think it's a good idea to name your club after him?"

The boys agreed it was "pretty good," so "The Kit Carson Hikers" it was.

At the second meeting Tom suggested that his father would make a good club advisor, and that if he didn't feel he had time to help out with the club, maybe Reverend Jones would be glad to come in.

Mr. Johnson, who liked to hike himself, gladly took the advisorship and he promised to accompany the boys on every hike he possibly could.

"One thing I think we should do, boys," he said at the first meeting he attended, "is take in more fellows. Let your other chums get some of the benefits. Be sure you get congenial companions, though, for there is nothing worse, I guess, than going hiking with a fellow who's always complaining."

There were 15 boys at the next meeting of the Kit Carsons.

TODAY'S GREAT PERSON

April 20—Your Birthday?

James Duval Phelan, the man who erected the largest building in San Francisco after the fire there. He was mayor of San Francisco from 1896 to 1902, and U. S. Senator from California for the term of 1913-1921. Born, Saturday, April 20, 1861.

DAILY HARDKNOT
I am composed of fifty-four letters and form two lines of a poem by William C. Bryant.

My 4-9-22-2-49 is a pleasure boat; 4-29-33-28-5 is a covering for a bed; 4-1-5-15 is merriest; 6-33-17-42 is a useful metal; 27-26-39-25 is identical; 19-23-35-37-40 is a habitation; 1-20-42-53-39-51 is to lay hold of; 1-4-43-43 is to bind; 52-50-32 is a personal pronoun; 46-3-48-13 is a smaller quantity; 24-16-21-36 is often found on rocks; 34 is a common exclamation; 31-10-11-47-7 is a wind instrument; 12 and 18 are the 21st and 14th letters of the alphabet, respectively. Rearrange the letters according to their numbers and you'll see what I say.

Newspaper Scandal—A Game

Have each player choose some profession or trade. One, for instance, may be a blacksmith, another a doctor, another a plumber and another a printer.

Some one is then given a newspaper and asked to read an item aloud. Every line or so the reader pauses and glances at some player. That player must then speak a word related to his occupation, to take the place of a word in the sentence being read, after which the reader continues.

Let us suppose the story is about a club meeting. "The president called the"—the reader pauses to look at the plumber, who says, "Monkey wrench"—"to order," continues the reader, and the "Pill," says the doctor—"read the minutes of the last—"Horse shoe," inserts the blacksmith at whom the reader has looked.

The Green Leaf

(By Dr. William E. Burton)

Beautiful as is the awakening of nature to new life after the pause of winter, the phenomenon has other aspects which may now and then give us occasion for thought as we behold the verdure of the earth in spring and early summer. The plants are our indispensable friends. They are our sole reliance for the continuity of the life of man upon this globe.

The energy of the universe is believed to be conserved somewhere; so far as known there is no ultimate waste of it. But the energy available for use grows less, and steadily is dissipated. Of the energy of the sunlight falling on the earth, no very great fraction is used; and as for that which radiates through space, nearly all, so far as we know, is wasted.

There are seven or eight little worlds that stop a trivial part of it; the rest is dissipated. If it is conserved, as we believe and hope, it is somewhere far beyond our reach.

But of that energy which reaches the earth, no form of animal life is capable of laying hold and transforming it into tissue. Vegetable life only can do that. Dr. E. E. Slosson in a remarkably interesting article says:

"Entropy is the gradual loss of energy to which all forms of force are subject. He goes on:

"In this war of self-defense the plants are our allies. They alone have the power to catch the sunshine as it falls and fix it in the form of starch for our food, or wood for our fuel. Every leaf in the world is working for us, in storing up potential power, in hoisting more energy to a higher level."

Prof. Johnstone of Cambridge, says:

"Solar radiation falling on sea and land fritters itself away in waste unrecoverable heat, but falling on the green plant accumulates in the form of available chemical energy. The total result of life on the earth in the past has been the accumulation of enormous stores of energy in the form of coal and other substances. By its agency degeneration has been retarded."

The trees and herbs 'are our friends. The ancients were not far wrong when they counted that man a benefactor who makes two blades of grass to grow where formerly there was one.

TAX EXEMPTION ON LAND PROPOSED IN GRIMSTEAD MEASURE

Would Relieve Farmers from Paying Taxes on Lands Worth Less than $10,000

MADISON, Wis.—Land values of less than $10,000, as well as improvements, will be exempt from taxation if a bill introduced Tuesday by Assemblyman C. M. Grimstead will be enacted into law. The bill is patterned after the Halston-Nolan measure before congress, and was drafted under the supervision of Prof. John R. Commons of the university.

Values in excess of $10,000 pay a graduated tax of from one-half to one per cent upwards and the bill is really "to provide a surtax on the right to the use and enjoyment of land values in excess of $10,000 and in excess of the value of improvements, preparation costs, standing timber, and fertility."

This bill does not touch the existing system of taxation either on real estate, personal property, or income, according to professor Commons, but is based on the principle that property may be classified for taxation purposes, and that a reasonable graded tax may be imposed on a class of property insofar as it is suited for such a tax and is not excessive.

The bill is intended by the author to lighten the increase of burdens on labor, on savings and expenditures, on improvements, and on incomes from improvements, by transferring increased tax burdens to property whose value is not produced by labor, or improvements, or conservation of resources on part of the owners.

THE Y. W. C. A. FETE AN APPRECIATION

BROWNING said: "Grow old along with me, The best is yet to be, The last of life for which the first was made."

"How good to live and learn."

A very happy old lady sat through an evening of rare pleasure on the occasion of the Y. W. C. A. fete, and like Rip Van Winkle, rubbed her eyes to see if she were really awake or if, perchance, 'twere all a dream.

As the curtain rolled up, disclosing the beautiful garden, the mind flew instantly to another garden on the banks of the Moser where Charles I played at bowls on the green, taking merry with his court, and then, still wandering, roamed in and out along the beautiful paths of Byssou's garden at Newstead Abbey, and many others in Merrie England, so realistic was the stage picture presented.

La Crosse was at last on the map artistically and doing things and here for me thank, personally, one and all who made up that picture and all those who contributed in any way to the remarkable success of the undertaking. The success it was of sheer artistic beauty and grace of execution. How the feet itched to be taking part in that stately minuet, the poetry of motion. How could one endure jazz and the fiddle after seeing that?

How one longed to be young and have the opportunity to be so trained in singing that one became part of a fine machine, perfect in attack, and capable of coming in touch with the great masters of music and giving from their inspiring themes to those hungry for harmony, while at the same time filling one's own soul with melodies that make less difficult some of the rough paths of life.

And threaded through all the numbers, whether singing, dancing, or the delightful children's stories, ran the message of service—happy in doing, growing in strength and grace while doing, and getting over the footlights pictures and joys that will remain with all who saw and heard many days.

All hail to those good ladies of the Y. W. C. A. Again I thank you. And to all those fortunate girls who took part, let me say I envy you your opportunity for growth and development in physical, artistic and spiritual beauty at so early an age. Let the good work go on and, to quote again from Rip Van Winkle, "Long may you live and prosper." Browning was right—there are compensations in growing old. One gets a double measure of enjoyment. "How good to live and learn."

As my mind wanders down the garden paths of the future I see at every turn the happy contented faces of girls who have learned how to assimilate the beautiful things of life that the "Y" so freely offers, looking eagerly to the future, building all the way characters fine and strong. In time, they, too, will realize the truth of Browning's lines: "Grow old along with me, The best is yet to be."

STATE INSTITUTIONS ASK APPROPRIATION OF OVER TEN MILLION

MADISON, Wis.—Request for $10,672,002 for operation of the charitable and penal institutions of the state for the next two years was asked of the joint finance committee Tuesday afternoon by the state board of control. Their estimated requirements were set at $8,000,004 by the state board of public affairs.

The board of control budget is the last of the big requests for money to be considered by the finance committee. Request of the university for more than $13,000,000 and of the normal schools for nearly $5,000,000 are the only ones that exceed that of the board of control.

With these big budgets before them, the committee will first dispose of the demands of the charitable and penal institutions, and will then start parceling out the available funds to the other institutions.

ALDERMAN ROELLIG ELECTED PRESIDENT OF COMMON COUNCIL

Present Incumbents in Each of the Remaining Offices Were Re-elected by the Council

With the exception of the office of the president of the council, the new common council of the city of La Crosse re-elected all of the old members to the offices of city attorney, assessors, north side, westchester, and bridge tenders at the adjourned meeting held Tuesday afternoon. Upon his nomination for the office of president of the common council by the retiring president, A. P. Pank, W. L. Roellig was unanimously elected to the office. James Waterspoon, Henry Ka-chary and William Baugh, present incumbents, were re-elected as bridge tenders. Niebauer and Noll were nominated to run in opposition to Mr. Waterspoon for the office from the north side, but received only two and one votes respectively. C. L. Lantley was re-elected as westchester for the north side for another term.

With no opposition for the office of north side assessor, Patrick McCauley was unanimously elected. Nick Werel and E. Scheuffler were nominated in opposition to A. H. Pine for the office of south side assessor, however, the present incumbent was re-elected. O. J. Swenson was re-elected unanimously to the office of city attorney. The few matters of business which came before the council included the placing of the bonds for the various city offices as follows: clerk, $5,000; treasurer, $40,000; comptroller, $40,000; justice of peace for the city at large, $1,000; engineer, $1,000; commissioner of public works, $1,000; tax commissioner, $2,000; chief of police, $2,000; and justice of peace and constables for the various wards, $500 each.

The petition of abutting tax payers for the opening of Fifteenth street, from Denton to Green Bay streets, was referred to the committee on highways.

The council entered upon its duties for the term at the meeting Tuesday afternoon. In compliance with the mayor's request that babies be brought to the city hall, the city health department was given the opportunity of caring for two of the youngsters during the meeting.

The mayor cordially invited citizens to attend the council meetings throughout the year, and especially the women, since they have now become a factor in the administration of public affairs.
